An Informative Discussion Of Provisions Of The California State Retirement Life Payments Plan On The Nov. 7 Ballot

By JOHN M. PEIRCE
Tax Counselor
California Taxpayers' Association

(Following is the third and concluding installment of an article concerning the California State Retirement Life Payments Plan, which will be before the voters in a special election November 7. The article is from the September issue of The Tax Digest. --Ed.)

8. Warrants Would Drive Real Money out of Circulation

On the assumption that these warrants would find their way into the channels of trade as contemplated by the plan, California would have two competing currencies—real money and stamp scrip. Because of the stamp-affixing provisions of the plan, the holders of the warrants would be encouraged to convert this "hot money" into goods as rapidly as received. This would result in a condition similar to that where gold currency competes with printing-press money. Under Gresham's well known economic law, which is to the effect that bad money tends to drive good money out of circulation, the warrants, like printing-press money, would tend to drive real money out of circulation. They would tend to depress prices in terms of real money and to inflate prices in terms of real money and to inflate prices in terms of warrants. Money needed for interstate commerce, insurance premiums, debt payments, etc., would be hard to get while warrants would be hard to dispose of. As the result, prices in terms of warrants would sky-rock upward as scrip deluged the channels of trade. In fact, a situation could exist similar to the inflation and ultimate repudiation of German marks some fifteen years ago, which ended in Germany's financial collapse. This possibility, however, would depend on whether or not merchants accepted the warrants vouuntarily on a large scale.

9. Past Experiments in Large Scale Use Of Stamp Scrip Have Failed

The success of this pension plan is contingent upon the successful application of the stamp currency idea. Several small American cities tried the scrip plan experimentally during the depression as a means of relieving unemployment and stimulating business, but the amount of the scrip issued was usually limited to a few hundred dollars and as a result had no effect on the prevailing currency. The most notable instance where stamp currency was put to large scale use was in the province of Alberts, Canada, in 1936. The government planned to issue $2,000,000 in scrip but printed only $500,000 worth, all in one-dollar bills. Of that total, only $239,000 was placed in circulation, and in a few months the plan collapsed. Some 19,000 of these warrants are still outstanding, most of them in the hands of souvenir collectors.

10. Use of Warrants for Taxes Could Paralyze Government Finances and Destroy Public Credit

This proposed constitutional amendment requires that the state, counties, cities, school districts, and other governmental subdivisions and agencies accept warrants at face value in payment of taxes, fees, and other obligations due the public treasuries. It is probable that the warrants would not be readily acceptable in the channels of trade and that pensioners would sell them at a discount to taxpayers for taxpaying purposes. They would then glut public treasuries because of their forced acceptability in payment of governmental imposts. Without ready money, governmental agencies would be unable to pay their employees, buy food for the inmates of public institutions, take care of the dependent poor, meet interest and redemption charges on the public debt, and take care of their many obligations. The paralysis of the fiscal operations of government would in tourn reflect itself in the business life of the entire state and cause much general suffering among the people.

On the other hand, taxpayers might hesitate to pay their taxes in discounted warrants for fear they would at some later date be worthless because the law under which they were issued had been declared to be in violation of the Federal Constitution. The result could be the sudden discovery that taxes had to be paid in real money and that money invested in warrants for taxpaying purposes had been cast to the winds. Moreover, delinquent penalties might have to be paid and real money taxes might have to be increased at some future date to meet unpaid obligations incurred during the warrant fiasco.

11. Proposed $20,000 000 State Bond Issue Would Add to Mounting Public Debt

In order to provide working capital for the proposed credit clearing bank, this measure authorizes the issuance of $20,000 in State of California bonds. These bonds would be guaranteed by the State, which means that they would become a charge upon the taxpayers if the pension plan failed to operate as anticipated. The bonded indebtedness of the state and its political subdivisions is already $1,450,000,000 and the public credit should not be jeopardized by adding to it. Curiously, this bank would be neither strictly public nor private. It would be controlled by the administrator and his three assistants, but owned by stockholders who would have no voice in the management.

12. Proposed Gross Income Tax Would Add to Present Tax Burden

It is proposed that a 3 per cent tax be levied on every financial transaction, except those in which retirement warrants are used, those the proceeds of which are converted into warrants, those involving interstate commerce, and a $3,000 annual exemption for every taxpayer. The application of this tax could have opposite results, depending on the extent to which warrants were accepted in the channels of trade. If the warrant plan failed to operate commercially, there would be no exemptions under the gross income tax except interstate commerce transactions and the $3,000 exemption per taxpayer. Every business transaction would then be subject to a 3 per cent tax and this pyramiding levy could conceivably yield up to $350,000,000 a year. An offset would result from the application of the proposed $3,000 tax exemption on owned-occupied homes amounting to some $43,000,000 a year, but this would not relieve gross income taxpayers. Present state and local collections approximate $530,000,000 a year, so that the proposed gross income tax could increase this tax burden proportionately unless certain existing taxes were reduced or eliminated. On the other hand, if warrants entered the channels of trade as anticipaaed by the promoters of this plan, cash transactions could disappear and there would be no revenue from the gross income tax. The same would be true of the sales tax, the personal

JOHN WITMER DIED SUNDAY

Placerville Native, Druggist At Camino, Heart Attack Victim

Private funeral services for Mr. Witmer will be conducted at the Dillinger chapel at 2 o'clock Tuesday afternoon by the officers of Placerville Parlor No. 9, N. S. G. W. Interment will be at the Union Cemetery. The family has requested that their friends please do not send flowers.

John Witmer, 65, a native of Placerville and for a number of years engaged in business at Camino, passed away early Sunday morning following a sudden heart attack.

His death came suddenly and unexpected for although he had been cautioned against undue exertion and had been under a doctor's care at different times for several years, he was able to be up and about and none suspected his condition was approaching a critical stage.

The body was removed to the Dillinger mortuary chapel and the arrangements for the funeral services are pending.

Mr. Witmer was a native of Placerville, born July 21, 1874. He attended the local schools and was graduated in the College of Pharmacy of the University of California, later engaging in his profession at Sacramento and in other Sacramento Valley cities where for several years he operated his own store.

Several years ago he returned to this county and established a pharmacy at Camino.

He was a member of Placerville Parlor No. 9, N. S. G. W.

Mr. Witmer is survived by his wife, Mrs. Emma Witmer, of Camino; their daughter, Mrs. Irene Donelson, of Sacramento, and by one grandchild.

He also is survived by his mother, Mrs. E. W. Witmer, and by one sister, Mrs. James B. Blair, of this city.

Sacramentan Fined $200 For Drunk Driving

Carl E. Wainscott, 48, of Sacramento, who was arrested Sunday evening in the Deer Creek district by State Traffic Officer H. B. Fowler, pleaded guilty Monday morning before Justice of the Peace W. G. Given the alternative of 100 days in jail, Wainscott was not able immediately to pay the fine although he instituted arrangements looking toward paying the fine.

Officer Fowler reported Wainscott "hit another car" about 8 o'clock Sunday evening in the deer Creek vicinity. No one was reported injured.

DEER FENCING TEST BEGUN

3-Wire Barricade Built Saturday Around Acre Plot In Deer Valley

The experiment of the county Farm Bureau in the use of electrically charged fences for the control of deer damage to crops became a reality Saturday with the erection of a fence on the Vinton Veerkamp property at Deer Valley.

The fence, three strands of 12-guage, 4-point barber wire, surrounds a plot about an acre in extent which contains a truck garden and clover pasture.

It was erected by the Farm Bureau under the direction of Max Bollman, chairman for the experiment, with the co-operation of Arthur Hensley, of the state fish and game department, Mr. Veerkamp and the farm advisor.

The bottom wire of the fence is about ten inches from the ground. The second wire is fourteen inches above the first and the third wire is fourteen inches above that. The top and bottom wires are grounded and the middle wire is charged.

The experiment will be watched with interest not only by the Farm Bureau and by farmers of the county, but also by the state Fish and Game department, which has assisted in other experiments of a similar nature elsewhere in the state, notable at Lake County.

It was indicated that the Lake County experiments pointed to the conclusion that different types of fences may be needed in different localities to be entirely successful in the control of deer damage by this method.

TODAY'S PROFILE

BY UNITED PRESS

The San Francisco general strike of 1934 catapulted the name of Harry Bridges into the news forefront and for five years the man has been a stormy petrel on the national scene.

Was he a Communist? That question constantly rose and on it hinged several attempts to have Bridges deported as an undesirable alien. Finally, on July 10, 1939, he was called up for a deportation hearing, with Harvard James M. Landis sitting as the representative of the U. S. Immigration Bureau of the Department of Labor. At this hearing Bridges answered the questions, and in this way:

Q.—Are you an alien? A.—I am.

Q.—Are you a member of the Communist party? A.—No.

Q.—Have you at any time been a member of the Communist party? A.—No.

That was the defense of the Australian-born West Coast CIO director.

Born in Melbourne in 1900, Harry Bridges went to sea for adventure as a boy. He sailed between Melbourne and Tasmania and in two years as a seaman on this run was shipwrecked twice. He entered the United States in 1920 and filed for citizenship in that year. He permitted his papers to lapse, however,

SUMMIT HOME IS BURNED

Benson Residence, Hit By Bolt, Razed; Lightning Starts 24 Forest Fires

The home of Mr. and Mrs. Warren Benson, in the Summit district, was destroyed and 24 fires attributed to lightning were reported on Eldorado Forest up to 3 o'clock this afternoon as a result of the morning's thunderstorm which intermittently interrupted electric power service throughout the county.

The Benson home is reported to have been hit by a bolt about 11 o'clock this morning. Mrs. Benson was in Placerville at the time and her husband and their son were near the barn on the place when, after a particularly sharp series of flashes, they looked toward the house and saw the dwelling ablaze. They rushed to the home but were unable to save anything from the six-room dwelling.

Mr. Benson was rather badly burned on one arm attempting to fight the fire. The loss was said to have been partly covered by insurance.

Eldorado Forest headquarters reported 24 lightning fires for the morning. Two were on Pacific district, the balance on Georgetown district.

The state division of forestry reported four fires for the day and three still burning. An early-morning fire was believed to have been put out by the storm. At any rate, a suppression crew never found it and the fire stopped burning.

Three fires burning early this afternoon included one near Aukum, one in American Canyon west of Pine Hill, and a third in the Stonebreaker vicinity.

The Benson fire was not reported the state Division of Forestry.

Grade Schools In Session

H. S. Enrollment Now 578; Placerville Youngsters Are Slow To Enroll

Virtually all grade school of the county were in session today, according to previously reported plans to the office of the County School Superintendent. Some schools opened last week and it was indicated that the balance of the schools would be in session today.

Placerville Grammar school, which was among the schools starting work today, reported an enrollment of 340 shortly after noon. This included the Uppertown school, with an enrollment of twenty-eight, but did not include the kindergarten, in which there are 22.

School officials, who had expected an initial enrollment of about 400, said probably the weather of the day had some bearing on the failure of a number of the pupils to attend the opening day. The children were especially urged to enroll promptly so that they may not find themselves behind in their class work.

The high school on Monday reported four new registrations, raising the total for the year to 577. The enrollment by classes now includes 112 seniors, 122 juniors, 169 sophomores and 174 freshmen.

Mr. and Mrs. Merco Petach are spending the week on vacation in the the Bay District. Miss Pauline Watkins is substituting as city clerk during Mrs. Petach's absence.

Farm Advisor Ivan Lilley was in Amador County Sunday, assisting sheep men in the solution of some of their problems.

THE Book Mark

By JANE VOILES

Will the war in Europe make a difference in the reading habits of the people of the United States? It is probable that some of us will go in for more "escape reading" while others will turn to instructive books. Whatever your choice may be, you will find it and many more in the new Macmillian fall list.

We would like to call your attention to a book of special interest in these days of crisis. It is R. C. Sheriff's novel "The Hopkins Manuscript." The hero who is a school master though not a Mr. Chips, witnesses something so unique in the earth's history that just a hint might be a give-away and spoil your pleasure in the book.

Those who like the historic touch, traditional religion and good writing combined must not miss Helen C. White's "To the End of the World." She writes for both the happy and the troubled hours. In "Another Cynthia" Doris Leslie gives a version of the perennially interesting Cinderella theme, how an innkeeper's daughter becomes the toast of London. Sarah Siddons and Lord Byron are among the characters in the book.

Mystery stories will be more popular than ever. Just as the late Edgar Wallace turned them out fast and furious so does Eden Phillpots. His "Monkshood" is a beauty with love, revenge, four corpses and all the gruesome trimmings thrown in. "Tabletop" his other story, is about cryptograms and buried treasures with a grisly murder and an ancient parrot for good measure. Aunt Maggie went spying about old country houses and it was just too bad for her. Medora Field tells her story with plenty of thrills and suspense in "Who Killed Aunt Maggie?"

In order to keep sane, people will ride their hobbies and acquire new ones. Those whose hobby is clipper ships will turn with interest to "The Romance of Clipper Ships" by Basil Lubbock. With its illustrations in color and in sepia this book brings back the days of towering canvas sails, of figureheads, and bowsprits of windjammars.

For those who like horses C. W. Anderson's "Black, Bay and Chestnut" is an indispensable book. Besides human interest stories, it contains lithographs of famous winners "Exterminator, the ugly duckling; Gallant Fox, the couriuos; Man o' War, the champion of champions" etc. Elephant fanciers, you would be surprised how many people are interested in elephants, will want a copy of "Tembo" by W. J. Wilwerding. It is the story of an east Afhican elephant who walked a few hours after birth and became a great forest giant.

One can always find "escape" in a garden. Ideal for gift giving are any one of the three following: "An Artist's Herbal" by Louise Mansfield, the famous painter of plant life. This book is illustrated with 38 plates and sells for one dollar. Rosetta Clarkson who has made a specialty of growing herbs in her garden at Salt Acres, writes a fascinating "herb" book "Magic Gardens." She gives valuable information about 200 plants, and their uses among them grandma's pennyroyal tea, modern hore hound cough drops, the sacred basil that stands in the doorways of Indian and the caraway seeds in our rye bread. Louise Beebe Wilder's "The Garden in Color" which sold formerly for $7.50 has been reissued and now income tax, and the corporation franchise tax, which produce 75 per cent of the State's General Fund revenue. Thus the state would have insufficient money to take care of its obligations including support of public schools, care of inmates in institutions, care of the unemployed under fifty, and service on the state's debt. In any event, the gross income tax, as would be true of other taxes, could be paid in warrants, whether obtained in trade or purchased at a discount for taxpaying purposes.

13. Proposed Gross Income Tax Could Result in Double Sales Tax

The act does not specifically exempt sales taxpayers from the gross income tax so it is possible that retailers would have to pay both taxes. If the latter interpretation is made and warrants failed to be acceptable in trade, retailers would pay a 3 per cent sales tax on every transaction plus a 3 per cent gross income tax on the same transaction, making a total sales tax of 6 per cent.

14. Proposed Gross Income Tax Allows No Offset for Other Similar Taxes Paid

The absence of an offset for other taxes now paid would result in gross income tax increasing the state personal income tax proportionately, which tax is already one of the highest in the nation. Moreover, the present state tax of 2.6 per cent of the gross premiums of insurance companies would thus be increased to 5.6 per cent. Similarly, the gasoline tax, the truck tax, the liquor tax, and the beverage tax would be increased by this superimposing of a gross income tax.

15. Sales Tax Would Be Riveted Into Constitution Under Proposal

The act incorporates the sales tax and the use tax bodily and expressly prohibits that they be amended henceforth except by initiative constitutional amendment. This would freeze these taxes into the Constitution, making it impossible for the legislature to reduce the rates or grant exemptions, if it desired to do so.

16. Administrator Would Have Unprecedented Power and Authority

The act does not contain the usual checks and balances upon which the system of American government is based. It provides the administrator, who, until the elections in 1944, would be one of the present promoters of the plan, with powers unknown in this country. Among other things, he need not answer to the Governor, the Legislature or the State Judiciary. He would not be dependent on legislative appropriations or regulations. The act specifically prohibits the courts from interference with his administration of the plan. He could have, if the act operated as intended, as high as $750,000,000 in cash from the sale of redemption stamps under his direct or indirect control without having to place the money in the State Treasury or report it to the State Controller. In the face of this great financial responsibility he would be required to furnish an indemnity bond only to the extent of $50,000. Finally, he may call special elections for the purpose of proposing amendments to the act. Giving dictatorial power of this kind to one man is inded contrary to existing public policy concerning democratic government.

17. Cost of Administration Could Approximate $62,000,000 a Year.

The act provides that the 4 cent overage in redemption stamps on each warrant shall be used to defray the cost of administration, so it can be assumed that the plan contemplates the expenditure of some $62,000,000 each year for this purpose. Thus the cost of merely administering this plan, to say nothing of the cost of the pensions, would materially exceed the present cost of California's liberal old age pension system. In further comparison, this cost would exceed the present annual payroll of the entire personnel of the State Government of California.

18. "Cost Nothing" Concept is Fallacious

The act states that its purpose is to carry out its objectives without "taking away, confiscating or otherwise subtracting from the economic stataus of any person or group of persons." This implies that the plan would cost nothing. If the warrants are to be used as money, they would be exchangeable for goods and services representing the labor of others. The warrants might easily come out of thin air, but once they are converted into goods, they subtract from the economic status of others. Goods cannot be produced by the printing press nor can wealth be increased merely by taking it away from one group and giving it to another. The proponents of Utopian money schemes confuse wealth and money. One represents tangible goods; the other is merely a medium of exchange or a storehouse of value.

Moreover, it is difficult to perceive how the imposition of a gross income tax, as proposed by the act, could be construed as not subsracting from the wealth or economic status of others.

19. Conclusion

If the voters were to approve this plan and the courts declined to interfere with its operation, economic law would undoubtedly dispose of it in one of the following ways: First, if merchants refused to accept the retirement warrants the plan would probably culminate in glutting public treasuries with an unacceptable medium of exchange which would temporarily paralyze governmental finances. Second, if the merchants accepted the retirement warrants and present economic values were retained, the cost of redemption stamps would soon become prohibitive and the plan would collapse. Third, if the merchants accepted the retirement warrants and present economic values were displayed by skyrocketing price levels in terms of warrants, the entire business structure of the State would be thrown out of balance within itself and with the rest of the Nation, the result of which would be economic chaos.

Lepke Surrenders

Louis (Lepke) Buchalter, fugitive racket suspect, is pictured after he surrendered to federal authorities in New York. Clean-shaven before his flight, he has grown a mustache. He said he had never left the city during the great manhunt for him.

and in 1928 he made a second declaration of his intention to become a citizen. Again he did not follow through. Then on March 28, 1939, Bridges filed his papers a third time. This declaration was made in the face of growing demands for his deportation.

Bridges is a militant labor leader. A man of small stature, he has a thin face and a prominent nose. He is a tireless worker.

What is his political theory? He gave a summary at the deportation hearing, and this is what Bridges believes:

That big estates should be confiscated.

That the amount of money a person may earn in a lifetime should be limited.

That labor unions should not restrict their activities to improving wages and hours.

That the National Guard is one of the greatest threats to democracy and civil liberties.

through the south against Lwow.

How long it might be before a major French-British attempt is made to crack the German main line was a matter of increasing speculation and in London the Evening Standard, owned by Lord Beaverbrook, caustically asked "what kind of a war is this?" The newspaper urged Britian to act more swiftly to aid the Poles.

The critical tone of the London newspaper coincided with reports from Berlin that Premier Benito Mussolini of Italy, might soon address a message to Britain and France through the Italian Ambassadors.

BLOCKADE TIGHTENED

LONDON — (UP) — Great Britain tightened her control of the sea today and dug in for a long war.

The British and French navies, working in close cooperation, were laying heavy mine fields in the north sea and the english channel. closing in the blockade on Germany which they hope will bring her to her knees.

The admiralty hastened its preparations to convoy all allied merchant shipping to and from allied ports and to the major ports of the world as German submarines sank more British ships. The convoy system was expected to be so effective as to reduce the toll of torpedos to a minimum.

"DEAD END KIDS" STAR IN "HELL'S KITCHEN" AT THE EMPIRE

Entertainment of the sort that is guaranteed by the inclusion of the "Dead End" Kids in the cast of any picture is provided by them in heaping measure in their latest Warner Bros. production, entitled "Hell's Kitchen," which opened yesterday at the Empire Theatre. They have come to stand for a swell combination of exciting, melodramatic action and uproarious humor, and that is just what they supply in "Hell's Kitchen."

Of course, they have plenty of adult as well as juvenile aid, particularly in the person of the gravel-voiced Stanley Fields, who strikes one in this production as nothing more nor less than a "Dead End" Kid grown up, older certainly, wiser maybe and tougher perhaps.

The romantic interest, in what amounts to a side plot accompanying the main story about the relations of the Dead Enders and Fields, is capably handled by Margaret Lindsay and Ronald Regan, and this well-teamed pair also have a good share in furthering some of the melodramatic moments. The villain of the piece is Grant Mitchell, who gives an impressive portrait of a brutal but slyly hypocritical rascal, and a stand-out among the scores of other boys besides a Dead Ender in the cast is Frankie Burke, who came to fame first for his portrayal of the juvenile Cagnel in "Angels With Dirty Faves." The picture closes tonight.

sells for $2.95. It contains over 300 full-color illustrations that will delight the heart of every amateur gardener.

Among the new "instructive" books, one of the best is by William Allen White, editor of the Emporia Gazette. Mr. White has watched and aided in the development of the West and he knows many aspects of American life. His book "The Changing West" an economic theory about our golden era, will be out in October. "There was a time when money came easily to the settlers of the West and Mr. White suggests that liberty is like wealth, you have what you can afford to buy."

Stewart Holbrook who you will remember for his lively book "Holy Old Mackinaw," the story of the Lumberjacks, has a new book out this month, "Iron Brew: a Century of American Ore and Steel." It makes, thundering history, the announcement reads. If any one can make it that Stewart Holbrook can. He tells you about "the 'saga of the ore-finding Merritt boys, mine superstitions and disasters, the saloons and fancy houses of the mining towns, the mingling of races," in fact, all the color and romance of his subject.

Two books by women are of peculiar interest. One is by an English woman Clare Leighton — "Sometime-Never" is the title. It is a book full of changing scenes, an English village, Pittsburg steel mills, an upland village in Dalmatia, a valley in Provence, and finally negro Harlam. Puzzled by what is going on in the world today, Clare Leighton states her conception of the real values in life in this book.

Mary Ellen Chase who is as American as her name sounds, who taked over the radio and on the platform in California last year, has wirtten a companion volume to her book "A Goodly Heritage" called "A Goodly Fellowship." It pictures the changing ideas and ideals of American education through the last thirty years and is written with the vivacity and humor characteristic of Miss Chase's work.

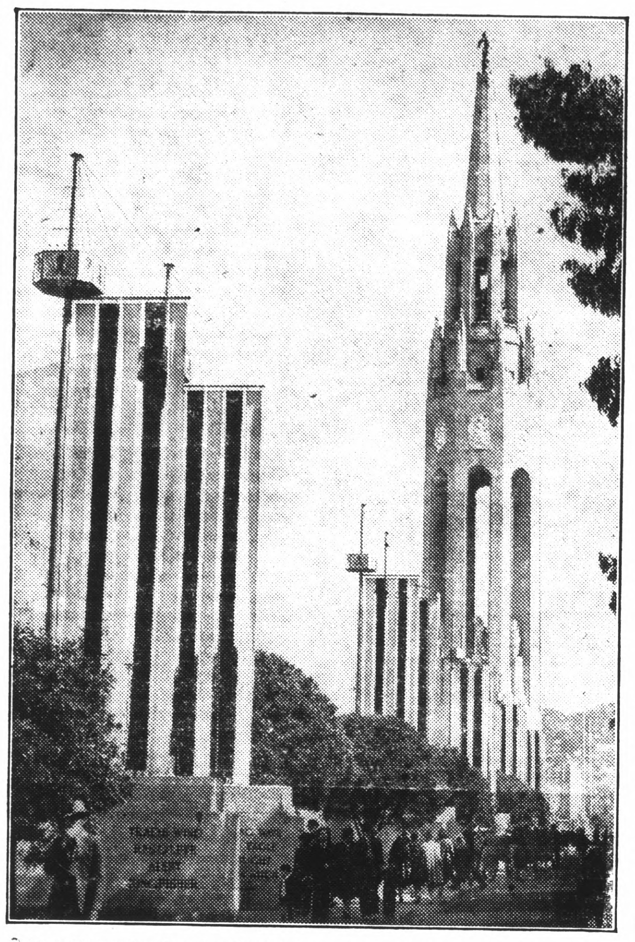
Fair Court of Seven Seas



Ruled over by the stately 400-foot Tower of the Sun, the beautiful Court of the Seven Seas at the Golden Gate International Exposition is a favorite with Fairgoers. Soft colored streamers dance gaily in the gentle breeze as they stretch from the crows' nests that mark the Court, down to the bottom of the masts. Each mast serves as a memorial to the gallant ships of the old sail days that built up American supremacy on the Pacific seas.

COUPLE WED AT CHURCH RITE

E. Raber sang "I Love You Truly" as candles were lighted by Eleanor Chalder and Edith Thomsen in the aisles and in the sanctuary by Billie Rupley.

The bride wore the wedding gown in which her husband's mother was wed and the gown of Miss Marie Dallard, of San Francisco, who was maid of honor, was of the same design in peach color, while the dress of little Colice Ann Palmer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John H. Palmer, who was flower girl, was of the same design and of green material.

Dr. Rantz was attended by Dr. Lyndell French, of San Francisco, as best man. Ushers were Sylvio Ronzone, and George McKee, of Placerville, and Louis Penfield, of Mill Valley. A. S. Fox assisted throughout the service as organist.

Following the wedding service, the principals and their immediate families and invited friends adjourned to the home of Dr. and Mrs. Lester B. Rantz where a reception was held during which congratulations and good wishes were the order.

The happy couple took their departure later in the evening for the mountain home. We join their many friends in hearty congratulations and all good wishes.

Among those from distant points who were present to attend the wedding service and the reception which followed were Miss Vanita Scheicker and Mrs. George Von Hagel, of Sacramento; E. J. Dollard, Miss Laura Dollard, Miss Madeline Kirke, Mr. and Mrs. McManus, Dr. and Mrs. Winthrop Hart, Miss Eleanor Seiberlich, Miss Margaret Sullivan and Dr. and Mrs. Cheney, of San Francisco; and Mr. and Mrs. E. Luker, of San Bernardino.

Compliments to the pear bureau on their new moving picture, "Pear Lands of the Pacific" have poured into their office following each showing.

As a result of the presentation at the international Apple Shippers Convention in Cincinnati last month, requests have come in from fifteen eastern cities for the roadshow which has the moving picture as its main feature, supplemented by slides, charts and discourses on pears.

Many guests at the apple convention declared it was the best industrial film which they ever witnessed, according to a report from members of the Pacific Coast fruit trade who attended the convention.

Mrs. Fred Spriggs was in town Monday morning from Fred's Place.

THE EYES MUST HAVE IT

LIGHT CONDITIONING FOR Better Seeing

EYES ARE SLOW TO COMPLAIN about overwork or abuse, science tells us, slow to object to poor light. Thus by the time eyes do speak out, they have been strained, perhaps injured. That is why we say, "light conditioning for better seeing." For light conditioning means giving the eyes enough of the right kind of light for seeing comfort and safety.

Do you know why, for example, you sometimes squint or scowl when reading a newspaper? It is because your eyes are working hard to see. It takes three times as much light to read a newspaper with the same ease as you read a well-printed book.

Take these two steps for light conditioning in your home. Have a Light Meter checkup made of the lighting. There is no charge or obligation for this service. Then try the soft and glareless light from I. E. S. Better Sight Lamps. You'll find the cost surprisingly low, especially since electricity under the new reduced rates now costs less than ever.
